

ILG Technologies was founded in 2006 and provides customized IT solutions to state bar admissions organizations in the United States. ILG currently provides software and services in 8 states.

We have reviewed the allegations in the complaint filed in Bryan County, Georgia, and they have no merit. There has been no problem with the software and services provided to the Georgia Board of Bar Examiners.

The Georgia Board of Bar Examiners has been very forthcoming in accepting full responsibility for the errors made in connection with the July 2015 and February 2016 examinations. The Georgia Board of Bar Examiners has not cast blame on ILG or made any claim against ILG in these matters. ILG has worked with the Georgia Board of Bar Examiners regarding this matter, and the Board continues to use ILG's software and services.

ILG's IT solutions have worked successfully and without incident for many years and have assisted in the bar admission process for thousands of applicants.

ILG stands behind its software and services and looks forward vindicating itself in court.

ILG Technologies has retained Alan Wachs and Edward Wasmuth at the firm of Smith, Gambrell & Russell, LLP to represent it in the Bryan County lawsuit.
